SUMMARY.

Special assistance is attached to a statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the House of Commons on Wednesday.

Mr. Bonar Law said that he believed the long night of the world was drawing to a close.

There was active fighting by the French on Wednesday along almost the whole of the line from Soissons to Albert.

Important progress was made between Soissons and Reims, where the French advanced about four miles.

Six villages have been taken along this front, and very violent counter-attacks have been broken up.

The Russian brigade in France, which is fighting on the front north of Reims, successfully participated in the offensive.

The French since the offensive began have captured 17,000 prisoners and 75 heavy guns.

A German unit was surrounded in the Forest of Ville-aux-Bois and laid down its arms, 1200 prisoners thus being secured.

The French estimate the Germans have lost 100,000 men on the west front in the last eight days.

There has not been so much activity on the Italian front, where bad weather has prevailed.

The British have gained ground on the left bank of the River of Pampero.

A further portion of the enemy's front line, situated south-east of Looz has been captured.

It is calculated that the Germans on the Artois battlefield employed 600 guns.

Of these the British have now secured 250. The Germans saved very few within the captured area.

The military committee of the United States House of Representatives voted in favour of raising 50,000 men voluntarily.

General Wilson has conferred with the Senate military committee, urging them to pass the conscription bill with all speed.

The War Department is planning a levy of half a million conscripts, the President in the House of Representatives.

In the House of Commons Mr. Bonar Law expressed appreciation of America's action in joining the Allies.

Mr. Lloyd George said that the American decision was one of the most disinterested acts in history.

Lord Curzon, in the House of Lords, said America would use her whole energies to end the war on earth.

Semi-official circles in Vienna fear that the Allies will be obliged to conclude a separate peace.

American reports state that there was serious fighting in Constantinople last week.

American reports state that there was serious fighting in Constantinople last week.

The commission investigating the German action in the recent Balkan crisis, which were systematic efforts to reduce the citizens to servitude.

Women and girls were outraged in their homes and in the streets, committed to the altars of some churches.

Work has been resumed in Berlin, except in the metal industries, by the men who have been released from the front.

Twelve British vessels of over 1000 tons, and five of under 1000 tons, were sunk last week.

The British Government has commandeered 100,000 tons of wheat, and 100,000 tons of flour.

Landmark R. E. N. Thompson, of Sydney, has been awarded the Victoria Cross.

The "Colonial Gazette" says that the British used tanks in mass at Bullecourt, and that these were destroyed.

The new Commonwealth loan raised in London closed at one-quarter per cent premium.

A statement regarding war pensions was made yesterday by the Prime Minister.

The Council-General for the United States (Mr. Franklin) was elected at the Millers Club luncheon yesterday.

Mr. Brittain, replying to a toast, said America loved peace, but that did not mean she had forgotten the fight.

The war, he said, was a world contest, being waged in the interests of humanity and democracy.

Senator Miller said that with America's aid the world would see a greater freedom of a permanent peace after the war.

The proportional representation system was used by a deputation which waited on the Minister for Local Government yesterday.

The Minister expressed himself as favourable to the application of the system to municipal and shire elections.

A mysterious sickness, believed to be caused by a rare fungus, has broken out at Goodindale, in Queensland.

In some cases the patients are stricken with blindness, and several deaths have been reported.

Twenty-five families have temporarily moved from Goodindale through fear of infection. All possible precautions are being taken.

The latest return of soldiers who arrived from the front on Wednesday left for New Caledonia yesterday.

A conference of farmers' organisations in Melbourne yesterday considered the methods used in connection with the wheat pool.

Mr. W. A. Watt and Senator Miller were the chief speakers at a National rally in the Victoria hall yesterday, where a grand total of 47,000 votes has been secured.

The sittings of the Interstate Conference of Public Service Commissioners were continued yesterday.

A motion affirming that Public servants were entitled to the benefits of industrial arbitration legislation was carried.

During the past two months several strikes have occurred at collieries in the Newcastle and Maitland districts.

The Colliery Employers' Federation has urged members to refrain from striking without first trying to have grievances adjusted.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.

The vicar's wife looked at her with a frown which puzzled Nettie and made her blush.

Could it be that Sir Hugh had been incautious enough to speak to Mrs. Cavley about the subject he had broached to herself?

Nettie at once thought she had divided the reason of the anxiety to get her into the vicar's wife's room.

"You've seen Sir Hugh?" she asked quickly. "He has said something to you?"

"Something about what?"

"By the alarm in Mrs. Cavley's tones Nettie guessed that Sir Hugh had said something to her."

She reddened and did not at once answer.

"The vicar's wife looked into the vicar's face with an expression of frank horror."

"You don't mean to say, Nettie, that Sir Hugh said anything to you that he ought not to have said?"

"That he made love to you, asked you to marry him?"

Nettie was deeply disturbed, not only that Mrs. Cavley should have guessed correctly, but that she should take the news with so much acute distress and even horror.

"Oh, don't take it so seriously," whispered the girl quickly. "Do you know I think I never have been."

He doesn't appreciate other people's feelings: he is too much absorbed in his own. He has been very miserable ever since poor Rhoda died, and he just wants to get out of his misery."

Nettie was a little more reassured, but she was not quite sure that she was the best way to drive the old horror out of his mind. It is quite sure that he is not a very serious person. He is just like a child, a boy, about it. I don't think the affair seems real to him at all. It is just like a hideous dream, and he wants to wake up, and doesn't know how."

Mrs. Cavley listened to this defence without comment. But by the expression of her face Nettie knew that she was thinking deeply.

They were in sight of the station before she broke the silence.

"The train was already approaching, and she stepped on the platform and said with the most manifest eagerness—"

"We must make haste, or you will lose it. And you must see that you do."

She spoke as if she were sending Nettie out of reach of harm's way, the girl thought.

They drew up at the station just in time. The train was in, and a porter asked Nettie's luggage and made off with it, while the girl looked at Mrs. Cavley, who was afraid leaving the pony, and did not, therefore, get out of the carriage to see her off.

Nettie had her friend with hurried thanks, dashed into the station, got her ticket, and jumped into the compartment the door of which she held open for her.

But as she did so, Nettie saw Sir Hugh dart out upon the platform, and make for her carriage.

Frightened, she drew back from the window, but he came on, opened the door, and jumped in.

Nettie was annoyed and vaguely alarmed. It was not the right thing to do, to draw at the handle of the door, and to be travelling with her at such a time, even for a short distance.

She knew that he would have to change trains at Riverley Junction, which was the first stop. But after that she was to be alone with him for twenty-five minutes.

She let him sit down, and then she turned to the compartment, but she remained at the door, and even tried to turn the handle to get out.

As she did so, she saw Sir Hugh look at her with a look of surprise.

"Don't," cried Sir Hugh. "Don't try to get out now. Don't you see we're on our way?"

Nettie did see, and she desisted from her attempt. Sir Hugh was looking at her with a look of surprise.

She still stood at the window, however, with her hand on the handle of the door, and she began to move a little faster, she saw a man dash through the station door on to the platform, and run along in pursuit of the moving train.

She saw the guard warning him not to attempt to board the train, but he persisted, faster, and making a dash for it, got on the footboard of the guard's van, and clung to the handrails of the door.

"Oh, burst from the girl's lips."

She saw the guard open the door and drag the man into the train, and then she fell back with a sigh of relief.

"Yet I heard," said Nettie rather stiffly, "that she fell, for she was asking herself why he had taken such a risk."

"What the matter?" asked Sir Hugh from behind her.

She turned round, staring at him with eyes full of vague alarm, and he looked up at her.

"Oh," she said, "I've seen such a narrow escape. The Major—he might have been killed!"

"The Major?" echoed Sir Hugh, much excited, for he had seen nothing of the exciting episode.

She sank into the nearest seat, which was the one by the window, with her back to the engine.

"Yes, he has just caught the train. I didn't know he was coming to-day. He had to be pulled in by the guard."

Sir Hugh, frowning and cold, emitted a grunt of dissatisfaction.

"That's the way Somers keeps his promises," he said with sudden savage bitterness. "He said he would stay with them at the house to-night. The poor dear thinks that he will keep his word, and he doesn't."

Nettie was a little more reassured, but she was not quite sure that she was the best way to drive the old horror out of his mind. It is quite sure that he is not a very serious person. LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, Mr. Justice Duffy, and Mr. Justice Rich.)

TAXATION APPEALS.

Harding v. Commonwealth Commissioner for Taxation.

This matter stands part heard.

IN CHAMBERS.

(Before Mr. Justice Higgins.)

MOTION BY THE A.W.U.

His Honor heard further evidence submitted by the motion, that a dispute exists between station hands who are members of its organization and the respondents, the Pastoralists' Federation Council and others. On behalf of the applicant union, Mr. Campbell, K.C., explained that certain station hands had taken union tickets, "on the ground that their claims were not gone on with by the Arbitration Board." The time had not been gone on with because of difficulties in the way of jurisdiction were apprehended.

Witnesses replied in the negative, but added that the motion was a dispute between station hands who are members of its organization and the respondents, the Pastoralists' Federation Council and others. FRENCH ATTACKING

ADVANCE SOUTH OF LAON

17,000 PRISONERS AND 75 GUNS

LONDON, April 19. During Wednesday, there was active fighting along almost the whole of the line from Soissons to Auberville, where the French have launched their new offensive.

Important progress was made between Soissons and Reims, where the French, driving towards the large town of Laon, have advanced about 4 miles north of the Aisne, as far as Ostel and Bray villages.

Some six villages have been taken along this front, and very violent counter-attacks have been broken up.

The Russian brigade in France, which is fighting on the French front north of Reims, has successfully participated in the offensive.

East of Reims, there has not been such marked progress, but the French, in this sector, have taken many more prisoners and guns. The Germans claim to have made a successful counter-attack here.

The French since the offensive commenced have captured 17,000 prisoners and 75 heavy guns.

Except for one or two small gains, the British front has been quiet.

Bad weather continues on the West front.

FRENCH PROGRESS.

The French communiqué issued at midday on Wednesday says:—

South of St. Quentin, after the liveliest bombardment, the Germans attacked east of Chauchy. The first attempt was repulsed by our fire. The second, more violent, resulted in fractions of the enemy penetrating our advanced trenches. But these were all killed or captured by an immediate counter-attack, and our line was completely restored.

We vigorously continued the offensive at various points between Soissons and Auberville, east of Reims. In spite of persistent bad weather the operations on most of the attacking front were brilliant and successful.

North of Chavonne we captured the village of Ostel, and drove back the enemy half a mile to the northwards.

We captured Bray-la-Luitte, and all the ground to the eastwards, as far as the vicinity of Courtenay. Under the vigorous pressure of the infantry and the murderous fire of the artillery, the enemy fled in disorder, abandoning much material and his depots of food.

A single French regiment took 200 prisoners, belonging to seven different German regiments.

We captured here 19 guns, including five howitzers.

South of Laon north of Soissons our troops, covered by the divisional cavalry, broke up the enemy and captured Nanteuil-le-Haudouin.

South of the Aisne, after a spirited attack, we captured a bridgehead between Condé and Vailly.

An important German unit was surrounded in the forest of Ville-aux-Bois, and had down its arms. We thus secured a total of 1200 prisoners and 100 machine-guns.

The Germans at 4.30 in the afternoon furiously counter-attacked with two divisions between Juvincourt and the Aisne. Our batteries and machine guns fire shattered the attack, and inflicted sanguinary losses on the enemy, who was nowhere able to approach our lines.

East of Courcy (north of Reims) the Russian brigade crowned its successes by capturing a fortified town and taking prisoners.

We took 24 heavy and field guns in the whole of this region, including three 5-inch guns, each with a thousand rounds of ammunition, which we immediately employed against the enemy.

We reduced several centres of resistance and captured strong points in the Champagne, where 20 guns, including eight heavy guns and 500 new prisoners, were captured.

The number of unaccounted prisoners which have been sent back from the front since the opening of this battle exceeds 17,000. Thus far 75 captured guns have been counted.

The French communiqué issued at noon on Wednesday says: In the region south of St. Quentin there has been very great mutual artillery activity.

South of the Oise, east of the lower Coucy forest, there have been numerous patrol encounters. Between Soissons and Auberville we carried out at night-time operations of detail securing us considerable advantages.

Between Soissons and Reims a brilliant attack gave us the village of Chavonne and the complete position of Chilly. North-east of these places we carried the whole ground as far as the approaches of Bray-la-Luitte, into which our patrols penetrated, taking 250 prisoners.

In the sector of Ville-aux-Bois, which we captured, we have taken several fortified villages to the rear. Nevertheless, we captured 12 guns, including three heavy guns, a considerable quantity of machine guns, and numerous trench engines.

GERMAN REPORTS.

A German official statement on Wednesday afternoon stated: Artillery activity has again been intense on the sectors of the Aisne battlefield.

We repulsed French attacks on Reims, Bray-la-Luitte, north-west of Vailly-aux-Bois, a wood near Le Godeau, and at Courcy, on the Aisne-Marne canal.

We checked fresh attacks in the Champagne, which were preceded by the strongest artillery fire on a front of twelve and a half miles. Our counter-attack repulsed a portion of the wood between Marconville and Auberville.

We captured 500 prisoners during Monday's fighting. We have destroyed 26 armoured cars, and brought down 18 aeroplanes. Our prisoners now total 30,000.

A German official message on Wednesday night stated: A night attack brought the enemy a small gain in territory near Bray and the Aisne. A second French attack, after failure this morning, is now in progress on both sides of Craonne. Fresh fighting began in the Champagne this afternoon.

HEAVY LOSSES IN SHIPS.

SUBMARINES' WEEKLY TOLL.

LONDON, April 18. The Admiralty announces that the shipping movements and losses during the week ended April 15 were as under. The figures do not include fishing and local craft, and vessels of less than 100 tons are not included in the arrivals and sailings announced. The average weekly loss from the seven previous weekly reports of the Admiralty are given for purposes of comparison:—

ITALIAN LOSSES.

An Italian naval communiqué says that from the week ended Sunday last, 454 ships arrived in Italian ports and 419 left. Five Italian ships of under 3500 tons, and two sailing vessels of under 1500 tons, were sunk.

CONSCRIPTION IN AMERICA.

OPINION DIVIDED.

NEW YORK, April 18. The Military Committee of the House of Representatives, which rejected the President's proposed Selective Draft Act for conscription, voted in favour of raising 500,000 men voluntarily.

President Wilson has conferred with the Senate Military Committee, urging it to press the conscription bill with all speed without change.

The Department of War is planning a levy of 500,000 conscripts. If the President is able to induce Congress to pass the Selective Draft Bill, the conscripts would enter the training camps immediately, in order to complete the quota by August 1.

The official report from the destroyer Smith, which narrowly escaped being torpedoed by a German submarine off the American coast, states that the crew actually saw the periscope of the submarine 400 yards distant.

The Navy Department reports that heavy firing has been heard off Cape Cod, south-east of Massachusetts. The cause has not been disclosed.

To safeguard the Panama Canal, the ports of Cristobal and Balboa have been ordered to be closed at night, and all lights extinguished.

BERLIN STRIKE OVER THE FOOD SHORTAGE.

THE FOOD SHORTAGE.

LONDON, April 19. An Amsterdam message says it is officially stated that except in the metal industry, work has been resumed in Berlin by the workmen who, on Monday, engaged in a general strike.

The non-arrival of Berlin newspapers in Holland is a serious suspicion.

The "Kölnische Volks-Zeitung" says that the reduction of the bread ration is creating a more painful impression than any war measure.

The "Vorwärts" says the strike emphasizes the anxiety in regard to food supplies, demands the realisation of the German Emperor's promised reforms, and indicates a longing for peace.

The persistent reports of riots and strikes in Germany have puzzled many people, who cannot decide what are the value of these incidents in relation to the progress of the war.

The opinion that a general shortage of food, the recent reductions in rations, and the difficulties of the metal industry, are responsible for the disturbances, is supported by a German official statement, which appears in most of the German newspapers in February.

After recalling the "victorious struggle of the workers against the old war diseases, cholera, typhus, spotted fever, smallpox," it is stated that another disease, hunger, is spreading, and that so far no remedy has been found.

This disease is of a much more difficult character, as it is mental and psychological, and is quickly spread from one sufferer to another. It is found, strangely enough, in people who have never before known hunger, and in big towns.

It is first a fear of starvation, and out of this a real hunger develops.

The statement that this latest attack has resulted in the capture of the "Kölnische Volks-Zeitung" suggests that the strike is a part of the German revolution.

WAR NOTES.

RENEWED PRESSURE ON THE AISNE.

The greater part of the fighting referred to in the French communiqué this morning has taken place along the western portion of the Aisne sector, where the French launched the first and more extensive part of their double offensive on Monday.

The exact position of the old allied front in this region has never been as clear as it could be wished. The Allies have held a fair slice of country on the northern side of the Aisne from a point west of Vailly to Berry-aux-Barons.

This stretch of front on the northern side of the Aisne represents the centre, and the greater portion of the 35-mile front along which the French delivered their first drive.

The initial wave of the offensive carried the frontward German positions along the whole of the front, while eastward of Craonne, the country presents features of natural difficulty to the attacker, the enemy's second positions were taken.

After this opening attack the French devoted their energies to consolidating their positions, and cleaning up the enemy's second line.

With the temporary lull on the Aisne came the extension of the offensive to the Champagne sector. The fighting reported this morning represents an additional push on the part of the French on the Aisne.

This second wave has been directed towards the western side of the line near Vailly, and in the region where the French apparently held only a comparatively narrow strip of ground on the northern side of the Aisne.

The statement that this latest attack has resulted in the capture of the "Kölnische Volks-Zeitung" suggests that the strike is a part of the German revolution.
